THIRD PLACE, 18 & under age group: "An Element of Hip Hop" in color, by Sunny Sirimanochanh

Dramatic nightscapes of the port and the riverfront; the smile of a girl washing a motorcycle near the street; the face of a 98-year old woman -- all these images were among the winners in the city's "48 Hours in the Life of West Sacramento" photo contest.

Most of the entries were in color and most were upbeat symbols of the city, taken during a 48-hour period between April 30 and May 1. Winning entries were announced at last week's city council meeting.

These winning photographs are now on display at city hall, 2101 Stone Blvd. Many of them (because of darkness or dependence on color or

Judge dismisses lawsuit challenging local stadium

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

You could call it a "technicality," but it was a technicality of the victims' own making.

On Tuesday, June 1, Judge Timothy Fall of the Yolo County Superior Court issued a decision dismissing a lawsuit by the "Friends of the Library" against the West Sacramento ballpark project. The lawsuit, which had been filed by attorney John Latini of Sacramento, fell victim to Latini's own vagueness about just whom he was representing.

Fall's decision opined that Latini's clients did not appear to have exhausted all of their "administrative" options (prior appeals to the city council) before using the courts to block the stadium on environmental grounds.

The point became an issue because -- when pressed for names by the city clerk -- Latini's earlier appeal to the city council had been on behalf of several individual Sacramento County residents, while his lawsuit instead named only the "Friends of Sacramento" as his clients. It was unclear to Judge Fall that the lawsuit's plaintiffs were the same entity as the people Latini had been representing during the city hearings. Latini had been reluctant to name his clients both during the city hearings on the stadium and during the lawsuit.

Latini has not responded to calls from the News-Ledger for comment.

Team owner Art Savage, who plans to bring a Triple-A baseball team to West Sacramento in time for next season's opening day, was joyful about the decision in a press release from River City Baseball.

"We are thrilled with the court's ruling and look forward to the construction of the stadium in order to begin play in April, 2000," said Savage. "Demolition of warehouses has continued throughout this process. It is just another step towards what will soon be the crown jewel of the downtown regional riverfront entertainment area."

Savage has joined local baseball promoters Warren Smith and Bob Hemond in the ballpark efforts -- and both they and West Sacramento officials have been skeptical that the lawsuit may have come from rival baseball promoters in the Sacramento area.

City council member Greg Potnick said that, while Latini has not exhausted his possibilities of appeal in the stadium lawsuit, last week's court decision removed a major roadblock. A new "joint powers authority" involving Sacramento County, Yolo County and West Sacramento has already approved the sale of $40 million in bonds for the stadium, and the decision will allow bond sales to proceed -- even if there is an appeal.

He said few hurdles remain in front of the stadium's construction. One of them is a financial negotiation between the Single-A Stoctkon Ports baseball team and local promoters involving a payment of a fee for the right to bring another team into this area.

"That's not in my view a major stumbling block," said Potnick. "It can be worked out and in my understanding, it will be worked out."

He also raised the issue that West Sacramento might choose to pursue Latini's clients -- a process that could begin with finding out exactly who they are -- for the recovery of "the literally tens of thousands of dollars in legal costs" the city has paid in defense of the lawsuit.

"I have questions about the efficacy of pursuing the money the citizens of West Sacramento have lost in the lawsuit," Potnick said. "We do have a number of issues we'll be discussing in closed session regarding potential litigation involving the ballpark."

Forty-niner stamp issued locally

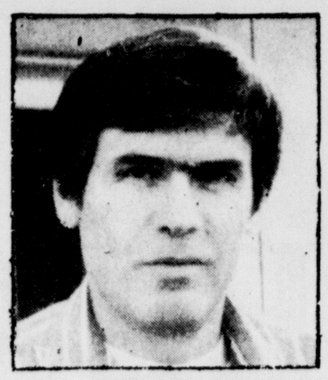
West Sacramento's Industrial Blvd. post office will be the first to issue a new 33-cent stamp commemorating the Gold Rush over a century ago. The stamp will feature the legend "California Gold Rush 1840" and a rendering of a group of prospectors.

A first day ceremony for the stamp will take place in Old Town Sacramento as part of "Railfair," a 10-day celebration of railroading and of the discovery of gold in California. Although there is a charge to enter Railfair 99, stamp enthusiasts may obtain admission to the stamp ceremony by calling (800) 953-3799 before June 10.

The California Gold Rush stamp is the third stamp in a year to commemorate the gold rush in the west.

Remembering the World War Two vets of D-Day

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

This past Monday, June 6th, was the 55th anniversary of the bloody World War Two invasion of the Normandy coastline in France. Code-named D-Day, it was history's largest military amphibious assault, and after five days of fierce fighting, the Allies tenuously held a thin strip of France only about 80 miles long. Within a month, though, more than a million Americans, British and Canadian soldiers were safely ashore and moving steadily inland towards Nazi Germany.

Accompanying the men who so bravely breached Hitler's famed Atlantic wall were an armada of warships and thousands of landing craft and support ships. Mountains of military equipment and supplies were also needed and they soon followed, as did the final collapse of the German Reich less than a year later.

According to an article written by Ian Phillips of the Associated Press, "German gunners poured 100,000 rounds a minute onto Omaha Beach over a two-hour period after the landings began on June 6." He also writes that "9,386 American servicemen are buried on the Normandy bluff; 14,000 others were exhumed and reburied back home at the wish of their families. Pristine white crosses and Stars of David stretch across a 172-acre memorial just above Omaha Beach, the deadliest of the D-Day beach-heads."

Fifty-five years later, the Normandy beaches code-named Utah, Gold, Juno, Sword and Omaha are still remembered with reverence, especially by aging Americans whose generation made the terrible sacrifices necessary to finally bring World War Two to an end.

Of the 60,000 Americans who landed on the Normandy beaches on D-Day, few were military professionals, and even fewer wanted to be there. They were farmers and barbers, railroad workers and auto mechanics, carpenters and teachers, and like all heroes, they weren't made in heaven, they were simply cornered some place on earth.

In "Hell on the Normandy Beaches", Ernie Pyle, the famous war correspondent, wrote: "By the time we got there the beaches had been taken and the fighting had moved a couple of miles inland. All that remained on the beach was some sniping and artillery fire, and the occasional startling blast of a mine geysering brown sand into the air. That plus a gigantic and pitiful litter of wreckage along miles of shore line.

"Submerged tanks and overturned boats and burned trucks and shell-shattered jeeps and sad little personal belongings were strewn all over those bitter sands. That plus the bodies of soldiers lying in rows covered with blankets, the toes of their shoes sticking up in a line as though on drill. And other bodies, uncollected, still sprawling grotesquely in the sand or half hidden by the high grass beyond the beach.

"We had our toe hold, but there was another and more human litter. It extended in a thin little line, just like a high-water mark, for miles along the beach. This was the strewn personal gear, gear that would never be needed again by those who fought and died to give us our entrance into Europe.

"There in a jumbled row for mile on mile were soldiers' packs. There were socks and shoe polish, sewing kits, diaries, and Bibles. There were the latest letters from home, with the address on each one neatly razored out -- one of the security precautions enforced before the boys embarked.

"There were toothbrushes and razors, and snapshots of families back home staring up at you from the sand. There were pocketbooks, metal mirrors, extra trousers, water-soaked packages of cigarettes, writing paper, air-mail envelopes, and bloody, abandoned shoes.

"The strong, swirling tides of the Normandy coast line shifted the contours of the sandy beach as they moved in an out. They carried soldiers' bodies out to sea, and later they returned them. They covered the corpses of heroes with sand, and then in their whims they uncovered them.

"It seemed to me a pure miracle that we ever took the beach at all. In the special sector where I landed our troops faced such odds that our getting ashore was like my whipping Joe Louis down to a pulp."

Those American soldiers who lived through the terrifying battles of World War Two, including the mighty struggles of D-day, are now our fathers and grandfathers, and they are slowly passing from us. But they leave behind a free and strong America, and their service and sacrifice can never be forgotten, or appreciated enough.

The original Endeavor sailed under famed captain James Cook, navigating from 1768 to 1771. The replica will arrive as part of a four-year trip around the world and intense exploration of the South Pacific.

Visitors will have a chance to explore where Cook's crew worked, slept, ate and even died. Boarding hours are from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. each day, with admission fees (which support the ship) of $10 for adults, $8 for seniors, $5 for children under 17 and $25 for a family of up to five. Youth, camp and school groups may pre-book tours at rates of $4 per child (For more information, call the port at 371-8000 ext. 6).

Endeavor's lower mess deck

Endeavor has a web site at www.barkendeavor.com.au. The replica was built in Australia by a non-profit foundation. The world tour is in association with the National Geographic Society.

The port's entrance is located at the south end of Harbor Blvd., at Industrial Blvd.

Sports Insider

The trail to the NBA championship took a bad turn for the Portland Trailblazers, as the San Antonio Spurs used their great big Texas broom to sweep the Blazers in four games. After losing game one in San Antonio, Portland let second game slip away from them, and were faced with a must win at home. The Spurs rode into town and blew out the Blazers in game 3 and 4 to send them to their first NBA finals for the first time since their franchise joined the NBA 23 years ago. The Spurs own the Blazers this season, beating them for seventh consecutive time. Portland only lost at home five times this year, three were to San Antonio!

In the Eastern Conference championship, the Pacers and Knicks are at war with the series tied at two games apiece (at press time). The Knicks lost center Patrick Ewing for the season and will have a difficult time replacing his center court presence. The Pacers have the home court advantage and will win this series.

The Spurs enter the finals as the hottest team in the league, having won their 10th consecutive game, one short of the NBA record. San Antonio is 11-1 in the playoffs, 6-0 on the road. Time has come for David Robinson and the Spurs to bring to San Antonio their first professional sports championship. The Spurs have been averaging over 32,000 fans for their playoff games and have the home court advantage! I predict this series will attract the one the largest TV audiences in NBA history! The Spurs will beat the Pacers in seven games. (If the Knicks win, the Spurs will win the series five games).

The WNBA Sacramento Monarchs will open the 1999 season Thursday in Los Angeles before they head home for their season opener on Saturday, June 12 (7:00 p.m.) against the Phoenix Mercury at the Arco Arena. Tickets are still available by calling (916) 419-WNBA.

The Giants (32-26) and A's (29-27) had the battle of the bay this weekend at 3Com Park. The Giants won the first game in 15 innings and Kirk Rueter shut out the A's 8-0 to win the second game. The A's managed to prevent a sweep, winning game 3, 7-6 on a ninth inning homer by Matt Stairs. Look for Barry Bonds to return to the Giants line-up sooner than expected. Bonds is recovering from elbow surgery and was suppose to be out until July 1. Reports have Bonds almost ready for action, about three weeks ahead of schedule. Don't be surprised to see him DH in Seattle as the Giants hit the road for their interleague weekend series against the Mariners.

The A's travel down south to San Diego for a three game series before they return home to host the Los Angeles Dodgers this weekend. The A's are about to release knuckleball pitcher Tom Candiotti and have recalled pitcher Tim Hudson from the minor league. Candiotti, 41, who has been getting blasted, is 3-5 this season with a 6.35 ERA in 11 starts.

Look for the Sports Insider to start covering the A's Triple A farm team, the Vancouver Canadians, in July. The Canadians will be moving their franchise to start playing ball in West Sacramento next season in April of the year 2000!!!

See ya next week!!!

New weight equipment at River City

From River City High School

The Natomas Racquet Club of South Natomas has donated a significant amount of weight lifting equipment to the River City High School strength and conditioning program.

Golden State Middle School principal Ken Whittemore secured the donation and brought the equipment to RCHS with the help of athletic directors Brian Watkins and Jon West.

RCHS strength coach Chris Baker was elated.

"I really appreciate Mr. Whittemore keeping an eye out for us," he said.

"This donation, combined with monies our principal Dr. White has secured for us, has put us in an enviable position. Our weight room is a real source of pride for us," Baker added.

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

Notes from around here

Perhaps now that the new Triangle Court center is settled in, and the economy is good, it is time for West Sacramento's city council and county supervisors to make some noise about bringing the city some more of the county services – particularly court-related services – currently available only in Woodland. It's an old issue, but one worth a new discussion.

There ought to be a local place for the most routine of justice-related tasks; a place to pick up and file standard court forms; perhaps a local traffic court to save both residents and police officers the time involved in a round trip to Woodland. This is a round trip that takes close to an hour in driving time along the two-lane, winding River Road, and a bit more on the freeway. It is a well-known inconvenience both to local residents and to law enforcement officers, who must make the commute (and exit their West Sacramento patrol area) every time they are needed to appear in court.

The West Sacramento public ought to have in its hands a report showing the most frequently needed county services now requiring that commute, and a plan to make some of those services (those that can be provided in a cost-effective manner) to West Sacramento. Surely we can do better than we are now in making county services local.

Increased West Sacramento services could also be convenient for the many residents of Davis and other areas of Yolo who commute to work in the Sacramento area.

There is a story that a newspaper friend swears is true:

At a newspaper conference, the subject of whether or not to charge customers for publication of obituaries came up for discussion. Newspapers are always looking for ways to stay in the black.

One publisher stood up and addressed the question.

"We used to publish them for free. Then we tried charging for them," he reported to his colleagues. "One day a nice elderly lady called and dictated the obituary for her husband. 'George Smith, age 85, retired carpenter, survived by his wife Eulah and by many loving friends.' "

"Our clerk then informed her that, for financial reasons, we now charged for obituaries. The minimum charge was $15, the clerk told her, but the good news was that the customer could add another eight words or so for the same price. There was a short silence on the other end of the phone, and then the customer read back to the clerk an expanded version of her husband's obituary: 'George Smith, age 85, retired carpenter, survived by his wife Eulah and by many loving friends, Cadillac for sale, low miles, air conditioning.' "

Anyway, the News-Ledger doesn't charge for obituaries and never has – these things are of local interest (and are "news") in a small community.

Letters to the Editor

Tasteless opinion

I must say I was very saddened by the "Guest Cartoon" printed in your last edition (News-Ledger opinion page June 2). I was even more saddened when I read who the artist was that created such a tasteless opinion of our students.

IRENE EKLUND

I found it very interesting that on the front page of your paper was a wonderful story of a family that has had their three oldest children graduate from our high school and receive scholarships to three major universities. While on page 5, a teacher from the same school trashed River City High School students by implying that they are all drug addicts and gang bangers. I, for one, resent that implication and believe Mr. Schumacher owes our students an apology.

I think we all know that one can find drugs on any campus in America. As parents and educators, we can only try to teach our children right from wrong and the life long impact drugs and gangs have on people's lives. We must also be positive role models for our students. I must say I see nothing positive in your so-called "cartoon." Our students are proud of their schools and I believe that they deserve praise for helping create what I believe to be safe campuses.

Mr. Schumacher not only lumped all students into one category, he has shown little or no respect for the students at River City. As a school board member, I continually hear from teachers how students today have a lack of respect. Mr. Schumacher, I was taught by my parents that to gain respect, you must give respect – how much respect did you give our students by your actions?

My husband and I have lived in this community our entire lives. We, along with our children and grandchildren, are proud products of our local schools. I believe that we received a wonderful education from a group of professionals, most of whom would surely debate your opinion of the students in West Sacramento.

I am proud of River City High School, our "California Distinguished High School." I only wish you were, too. Let us work together to be part of the solution instead of part of the problem. Your negativism will only hurt our kids and our community.

Fine art?

As I looked at your guest cartoon (News-Ledger June 2), I noticed that the arrow should have been drawn about one and one half inches to the left.

Whether or not this is an example of fine art, I will leave to others to decide. It is, however, an example of our first amendment right, which I fully support regardless of my personal opinion on the content. Given that I have the same right, I now wish to respond.

I found out some years back that it is very easy to stand back and find fault. It is much more difficult to stand up and find solutions. There are many ways to state an opinion, but this cartoon is an insult to the community, and to the majority of the students at RCHS who are good students attempting to get an education. It may provide instant gratification to the artist who had it published, but I don't believe it will rise to the level of being inspirational.

ED HOCKING

Part of this "cartoon" indicates some decay to the physical plant at RCHS. This is a result of aging, and happens to all buildings. This is why the Washington Unified School District Board of Education is asking that the community vote for, and support a bond measure on the November general election ballot. It is no great secret that all of our schools, with the exception of the new Southport Elementary School, need major refurbishment. Given that the bond measure will allow the district to get four state dollars for every local bond dollar, all school sites will experience major upgrades. This is a great opportunity for the entire community to mobilize and show our students how committed we are to them and their schools. It is also an opportunity to show the surrounding communities (Sacramento) who make every effort to steal our thunder (baseball stadium) that we are indeed a Premier City. Good schools, whether or not you have a student currently attending, benefit every citizen of that community.

If my rambling sounds as though I am offended by the cartoon, it is only because I am. Not for myself as a member of this community, or as a member of the board, but for the students and faculty who are working hard to affect change in those places where change is necessary.

A safety committee has been formed to address the safety issues brought before the board by community members. As a member of the committee, I look forward to the many possible solutions which I hope will be offered by the artist, who is also a member of the safety committee.

Perhaps we will have a follow-up cartoon.

You can help students everywhere and help your business at the same time. How? By asking potential employees for their high school records.

84% of high school students say they'd work harder if they knew that employers would look at their transcripts.* Thousands of businesses are already requesting records.

When you ask, you'll be sending a powerful message to students: "How you do in school can help determine what kind of job you'll get, how much you'll earn, even how far you'll go."

What does your business gain? Better students make better entry level workers; they have lower failure rates and require less skills training. You can learn a lot about a student from a school record: grades, courses taken, attendance, and extracurricular activities.

So start now by logging on to www.makeacademicscount.org for information on making academics count.

Make asking for student records business as usual.

GREAT PILES OF MATERIAL WILL BE USED IN CONSTRUCTION OF SACRAMENTO WEIR

LABORERS AND BUSINESS PEOPLE WILL REAP MANY BENEFITS FROM THE PURCHASE OF MATERIAL.

Preparatory work in the construction of the Sacramento by-pass has been started by the contractors, Teichert and Ambrose, and during the past week a force of about twenty men and many teams have been at work on the project.

Grading for the temporary railroad track for the Northern Electric Co. is nearly half finished and the clearing of the ground for the remaining part of the distance is nearly done.

When the above work will be completed the contractors propose to use the present track as a material track and the temporary one now about to be built will be used to accommodate the railroad during the time the work of construction is under way.

The location of the weir is immediately north of the Tule Jake Road, or to be exact, 103 feet from the road and will be located its entire distance along the right-of-way which the railroad now occupies.

A preliminary order for frame lumber was placed the other day in San Francisco in the amount of 128,000 feet. This will be shipped by steamer from the Bay and will be landed on the levee immediately fronting the by-pass, or to be exact, at the Leeman hop kilns.

When completed the Tule Jake Road will be placed on top of the concrete levee connecting the weir with the main levee now on the river.

The other end of the weir will be located just south of the Leeman home, or 2,200 feet distant from the southern levee.

In the construction of the weir a great amount of concrete piling will be used. Forty-seven piers will take the railroad track and the county road over the spillway. These piers will be supported by ten concrete piles to each pier, each pile being driven into the ground 26 feet. The bridge for the railroad will be of all steel while the county road will be of similar construction of that which

CARRAGHAR WILL LIKELY HEAD CITY COMMISSION

The announcement made by Dr. G. C. Simmons, Commissioner of Public Health and Safety, a few days ago that he would relinquish the position of President of the Board on July 1st, will likely be followed by the election of E. J. Carraghar to that place.

Dr. Simmon relinquishes the position because the social duties attendant thereto have kept him away from his family considerably.

Ed Carraghar is an able parliamentarian and can be relied upon to do justice to the position of President of the Board of Commissioners.

REMARKABLE RECOVERY

John Hart is at his home again since last Tuesday after having been confined for an operation for the removal of cancer from the lower jaw.

Yesterday his condition was greatly improved after he had been treated with X-ray, and his physician, Dr. June B. Harris, holds out much hope for entire recovery.

Mr. Hart had consulted specialists in Sacramento and San Francisco and they told him that his case was incurable.

He is now well on his way to complete recovery.

NEW CHARTER MAY MAKE LITTLE IMPROVEMENT IN CITY GOVERNMENT

ONLY POOR MEN WANT POOR PAY AND MAKE POOR PUBLIC SERVANTS

The proposal in framing a new charter to return to the old form of Mayor and Board of Trustees may be all right but the charter framers have tentatively agreed that the trustees must receive only $25 per month for their services and will be elected at large if present plans are confirmed.

Under the old charter much fault was found because the city trustees were forced to devote much time to the interests of the city and received in remuneration only $5 per meeting. The people voted out that form of government four years ago because it was not satisfactory.

The proposal to have the trustees elected at large is an additional burden to the man who would serve the city as a trustee for the cost of an election would bear too heavily on any man who would be honest in office and administer squarely the affairs of the city.

What power the charter framers propose to place in the hands of the Mayor is still to be determined. It is sufficient to say, however, that one of the principal causes for the abrogation of the old charter was the power placed in the Mayor's hands, too much power for one man to control, too much patronage for one man to handle.

Now that the Freeholders have an opportunity to frame an intelligent instrument for city government they should do so while comparing what the old charter and the present charter have done for the people.

Economy is not the only thing that should be considered in the formation of a new charter.

MIGHTY HEAVY TAXES PAID FOR LITTLE SERVICE FROM STATE ADMINISTRATION

Last Sunday morning, Governor Hiram W. Johnson, of the great State of California returned from the East dejected in spirit, downcast in countenance and ready to abide by any faith that might save him a future political career.

A week behind time he landed in California to find that the people had mobilized the National Guard to protect the United States from invasion by Mexico. And he, the Governor of one of the largest border States was absent when the call for mobilization came—absent, too, not to help the cause of the people, but to safeguard his own political future.

Strange it is that the people suffer and sigh and swallow the bull that the Governor passes—that big, humanitarian bull of which he is so fond of using when the occasion demands it.

And in his honor they have named the mobilization camp, Hiram W. Johnson, and when it was christened he was absent, absent at the moment when he should have been here—absent at the critical time when the call to arms came to the great State of California.

Subsidized newspapers have lauded the Governor since he returned to his post of duty. The Bee and the Union and the News who have secured jobs at the hands of the Governor have been telling about the magnanimous spirit exemplified by the great Governor on his return from his nation-wide campaign to help himself into the U. S. Senate or some other job like that.

A week too late and a substitute in the chair who did not attend to business, and who stayed in Los Angeles too long to suit the people, the Governor returned ashamed of his administration.

It was a pleasure to note that the National Guard or the members thereof had sense enough to mobilize without a leader, without the Governor, without Hiram W. Johnson.

And in the meantime the people are paying more taxes than they ever paid before to keep Hiram W. Johnson in a job, and while in the job he deserted his post of duty to do politics for himself and his side-kicking Bull Moose, Roosevelt.

It seems rather strange that the people can reconcile the Governor's absence with the high standard of efficiency which he has been claiming.

And yet it has been thus always since he was installed in the position as Governor of the great State of California.

Four years ago for months at a time, he paraded up and down the United States to secure his own election to the Vice-Presidency and sad to relate, he failed, and now meekly with his tail down he comes back to indorse the Republican candidate named by the Chicago convention.

Perhaps it would be a good idea for the Freeholders who are now framing a charter for the City of Sacramento to name Hiram W. Johnson as City Manager. If he did not make good he could at least bull the people into believing that he did and when he had been away for a few weeks for a vacation or to help his own interests he could make them believe that he had been working for them.

And the tax rate in California is so damnably high at the present time with a reserve of $5,000,000 in the state treasury that many property owners are forced to allow their property to be sold at public auction.

CITY COMMISSIONERS ARE REQUESTED TO PURCHASE TWO SACRAMENTO CITY SALOONS

The request to purchase two saloon licenses within the city limits was made a few days ago to the Commissioners of Sacramento.

This fact bears evidence that saloons are not at the present time paying institutions and that the proprietors are willing to forfeit the money they paid for these saloons some time ago.

A continuous agitation against saloons has been kept up during the past few years. The Anti-saloon League and every prohibitionist in the country has made the saloon the butt of his antagonism and nearly every preacher in Sacramento has made the saloon business a source of revenue for himself.

Be it known that the saloon men of Sacramento as a class provide through the provisions of an ordinance a fund for the purchase of saloon licenses and that fund is ample at the present time to purchase any licenses that may be offered for sale to the city.

Under the provisions of Ordinance 72 the license of the saloon men of Sacramento was raised $200 per year and in that ordinance a specific provision provides a fund for the reduction in the number of saloons within the city.

Some short time ago two licenses were offered to the city for sale and a howl of objection was sent up against the purchase by some property owners.

These people believed that the taxes being paid by the people were about to be used for the purchase of saloon licenses. They imagined that the property owners of the city were providing funds to be paid to saloon men for their licenses.

This was all a mistake. The saloon men as a class through the provisions of Ordinance No. 72 provide a fund for the purchase of saloon licenses that may be offered to the city, and the taxpayer of the town loses nothing and pays nothing when the number of saloon licenses is reduced.

For years a cry has been sent up to heaven to reduce the number of saloons in the community and now when provision is made for that reduction some fanatics object.

It seems evident that no matter what action will be taken some people will not willingly grant justice to the liquor dealers although they would exact leniency for themselves.

By all means the City Commissioners doing justice to both sides of the question should purchase the saloon licenses so long as the fund provided for that purpose is ample.

Tips from the West Sacramento Police Department on bicycle riding safety for youths

From the West Sacramento Police Department

May 1999 was Bicycle Safety Month. The words "wear a helmet" can save a child's life!

This spring and summer, more than 400,000 children under the age of 14 will end up in hospital emergency rooms with serious bicycle injuries – some of them fatal. Did you know that one-third of these injuries could be prevented if the children wore their helmets? Even with many states mandating helmet wear, more than 90 percent of kids under the age of 14 don't wear them regularly.

This is the perfect time to remind our children, and adults alike, of some important safety rules.

Always wear a helmet when you ride.

Always do a safety check before you ride. Be sure nothing on your bike is wobbly, loose or cracked.

Never give anyone a ride on your handlebars.

Wear bright colors so you can be seen.

Be alert for things on your path.

Avoid riding at night. Walk your bike home or have someone pick you up instead.

Wear a strap or rubber band to keep your pants from getting caught in the chain.

Don't dart out of driveways or from between parked cars.

Stop at all stop signs.

Be careful when checking traffic and don't swerve when looking over your shoulder.

Always go with the traffic flow and keep to the far side of the road.

Parent tips:

So, your child wants a bike. That's reasonable. They're great fun. Every child wants one. But before rushing out and buying your child a bike, ask yourself the following questions:

Is my child old enough and mentally and physically ready to ride a bicycle in neighborhood traffic? (A bicycle is not a toy when it is ridden in traffic. The cyclist is governed by the same traffic laws as automobile drivers.)

Do we live in an area that is not congested with vehicular traffic? Am I willing to see that my child receives proper instruction on how to safely operate a bicycle before permitting to ride on the street?

If your child isn't ready to ride a bicycle on public streets and still wants a bicycle, then consider the following:

Are there safe places to operate a bicycle near my home places such as empty lots, parks or bicycle paths?

If your answer to this question is no and your child isn't old enough to ride on the street, then the question of buying your child a bike must also be answered no. You may be saving your child from serious injury or even death by taking a firm stand.

When you and your child have determined that he or she is ready to have a bike, what's next? Buy the bicycle? Before you do, there are several considerations to keep in mind.

Fit the bicycle to the child. A bicycle that is too large or too small is both dangerous and uncomfortable to ride. To determine the proper-size bike, the cyclist should be able to sit on the seat and balance the bicycle with the tops of the toes resting comfortably on the ground. The bicycle should not lean to one side or the other. The seat may have to be adjusted to accomplish this.

Young children should not attempt to operate a bike with hand brakes. Wait until they have developed greater strength in the hands and wrists before buying a bike of this type.

For maximum safety, bicycles should be equipped with: a warning bell or a horn; chain guard; coaster brake; reflective devices on front, rear, sides and pedal; a day-glo safety flag; a white front light; a red rear light; and handle grips.

For additional safety, riders should use pant leg clips, wear bright colored clothing and always wear an approved helmet.

Learning to ride a bike safely takes many hours of practice. Young children should demonstrate basic maneuvers in a safe area before being allowed on public streets. In fact, children younger than seven years of age need close supervision even when they are permitted to ride on quiet neighborhood streets.

For further information on bicycle safety and how you can register your bicycle, contact the West Sacramento Police Department at 372-2461.

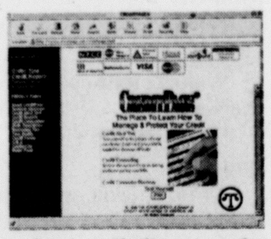
(NAPS)—Two emerging consumer trends, the increased use of credit as payment and the use of the Internet as an information source, are merged with a new website that offers consumers reliable, comprehensive and confidential advice about managing credit—all at the click of a mouse.

"This website is a great tool for consumers. It will help them better understand how they're spending and how to better manage the debt they owe," said Durant Abernethy of the National Foundation for Consumer Credit. "Most importantly, the site is full of information that will help people avoid problems with credit and debt."

The website, called Credit Page, is a collaborative effort of leading financial education organizations, nonprofit consumer credit counseling organizations and financial institutions. It was designed to help consumers manage credit, examine their spending habits, access their credit records and contact hundreds of money management and debt counseling advisors.

"Technology has changed how Americans spend their money and how they gather information," said Tim Becker, Vice President at Bank of America. "While credit transactions provide an increased level of security and convenience, they also require that people actively manage their spending to avoid problems down the road."

The site's sponsors recommend the following tips to help consumers protect and manage their credit:



A new website can make it easier for consumers to take stock of and manage their credit.

- Review your credit history. You can order an instant, secure copy of your credit report from the CreditPage website.
- Review your credit card statement. Become familiar with your interest rate, the statement closing date and the balance due date.
- Determine if you could be headed for financial difficulty. If you're having trouble paying your bills, you may want to consult a credit counselor.

"The success of our economy has sparked a rapid growth in consumer spending and an expanding array of payment options," said Ira Aurit, President of the Forms Group. "Logging onto CreditPage provides consumers an opportunity to take stock of their credit situation to be sure they're getting the most from the dollars they're spending."

SUMMER 1999 | Charter Communications | www.chartercable.com

Welcome to a whole new world of possibilities

"Before Bill Gates and I started Microsoft, we had a vision of a Wired World. Everyone would have a PC at home and at work that would be interconnected within a global network. This network would provide immediate availability to information and resources anywhere in the world."

- Paul Allen, co-founder of Microsoft and new owner of Charter Communications

The Wired World isn't only for visionaries and technical wizards. It's for everyone who watches TV or uses a computer. Whether you want to surf new channels or surf the Internet, Charter Communications will be your gateway to information and entertainment.

With Paul Allen's leadership, Charter is well positioned to bring you advanced digital technology for the home and office by way of enhanced cable. And digital technology is the key to a wealth of new services.

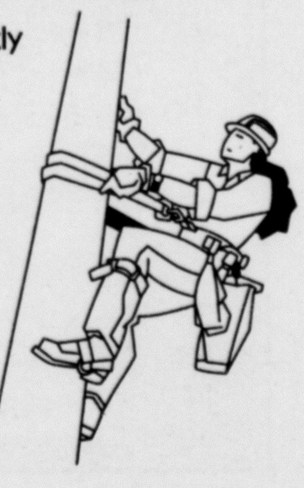
Protect yourself against costly repairs with Charter's Cable Safeguard Program

Due to recent changes in federal law, cable customers are now responsible for maintaining the cable wires within their homes. This means, if you have any problems with your cable wiring — from loose fittings and broken wires to pet damage and normal wear and tear — you cover the cost of repairs.

Peace of mind for less than a dollar

To help protect you from the high cost of potential cable wire repairs, we developed the Charter communications Cable safeguard Wire Maintenence Program. Just 75¢ a month covers the cost of repairing cable wires in and up to 12 inches outside your home. So, you not only avoid the normal $36.90 hourly charge for repairs like these, but you're also assured the repairs are done correctly by our experienced service technicians!



Sign up before a problem arises

Protect yourself from the cost of poetntial cable wire repairs and the inconvenience of cable service interruptions! Call 1-888-997-6642 today to sign up for Charter's Cable Safeguard Program.

Program does not cover customer-owned equipment or line damages caused by negligence. Other restrictions may apply.
